The Paris papers announce that when the Assembly resumes its sittings an effort will be made to make M. Thiers President for life, cre-President; to remodel the Assembly and modify the election laws by restrictions on universal suffrage. It is supposed that this will give stability to the republic. In view of the man-ner in which Gambetta's republican ideas are popularly received, and the inflammable ma-terial of France, such an effort would likely produce another revolution. -A remarkable tragedy occurred last Monday evening at the Orescent City. About six o'clock two of the most notorious roughs in Sew Orleans, named Jerry Lyons and John Henry, accidentally met on Common street, near Charles street, when they mutually re-solved to settle an old feud by arms. Both had revolvers and bowle knives. They conthough the battle until their ammunition was expended, then began backing with knives. So deadly was the encounter that both combatants were fatally wounded, each of the men dying before medical aid could be extended. Although a large number of persons were in the neighborhood, none were injured. The police maintained a masterly inactivity.

-in the course of the lecture on Saturday, by the Emily Faithfult, she made one very pointed remark upon an anomaly in the marriage laws of England as compared with the property laws of that country. She said that the solemn pledge of the English marriage service makes the husband say, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." Yet at the same time the property laws are such that the husband retains possession not only of his longing to his wife. While it is undoubtedly qualification, to the extent to which marriage ents are made and other special reservation in tavor of the wife, it is the common law doctrine on the subject. It is, therefore, a fory mir subject for the pointed and proper which Miss Faithfull made. In many of the States of the American Union, perhaps in most of them, the marriage and property laws are framed in a much fairer spirit towards married women. The San Francisco Call, in a retrospecrather discentaging view of affairs, and is inclined to doubt whether, after all, San Francisco has fulfilled its mission, or is what in the die order of things it should be. It has in the iwenty-five years of its existence attained the regulation of being an enterprising city, and its people a pushing, active, energetic community. Less than twenty-five years ago the atte of the Golden City was a sandy waste, covered with chapparal. To-day it is a busy thest with a permanent population one of hundred and seventy thousand, with churches, public buildings; schools, with all the consequents and attendants of civilization. One must admit that this is something, but yet the old regime, and, of course, the use of the when it is remembered that it is the only port where the vast commerce of the Pacific meets the Continent; that for its founding and build-agricultural resources of the region are. simply illimitable; that a trans-contin railroad has been constructed in its favor by government, we may even share in the doubts of the Call as to whether, with all these splendid opportunities, the City of San Francisco occupies the position it should to-day. -An eccentric character died recently in St. Louis, Mo., who is described by a correspondent as follows: "There died in this city yesterday of small-pox an eccentric old man named Hotohkiss, generally known as the Snapping Doctor,' the 'Rag Doctor' and the 'Dirty Doctor.' Hotchkiss was an illiterate man, who claimed to have supernatural powers of healing the sick through the agency of animal magnetism, and extraordinary stories of miraculous cures of chronic diseases by him are in circulation among the ignerant people who believed in him. He was a very old man, and claimed to be one hundred and but for this, would have been active support. forty years of age, with an expressed determination to live until the second coming of Christ. He was not only very old, but he was also a very dirty man. It is said that for twenty years he has not washed himself, and of peculation amount to anything, with that his apartments recked with filth. Dr. Hotchriss was a queer-looking old fellow. He wore a long gown and a red tez cap. His sharp, naggard features, begrimed with the accumuated dirt of years, his brilliant black eyes, restless with the fires of insanity, and his long, matted, snow-white beard, gave him a weird, unearthly look. His extreme age can not be doubted, though it is hardly probable that he was one hundred and forty." and the Result in the County. The board of county canvassers have last completed their tiresome examination of the vote of Charleston County in the recent State election, and their messenger is this morning speeding to Columbia with their official return. They have apparently striven industriously and faithfully to reduce the blundering returns of the clamsy managers to something like system and accuracy, and the result of their labors is now to be reviewed by the State board of canvassers. This board is by law composed of the Secretary of the State, (Francis L. Cardozo,) the Comptroller-General, (John L. Neagle,) the State Auditor, (whose office is now merged in that of the Comptroller-General,) the State Treasurer, (Niles G. Parker,)the Adjutant and Inspector-General, (Franklin J. Moses, Jr.,) and the Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the House of Representatives, (William R. Jervey) The board is to assemble at Columbia on or before the 10th inst., and it is made their duty "to determine and declare what persons have been, by the "greatest number of votes, elected to the "various offices, and to each of them." They also "nave power, and it is made their duty, to decide all cases under protest or "contest that may arise, when the power to "do so does not, by the Constitution, reside "In some other body." The result of the election in this county, so far as it can be determined by the county canvassers, has already been fully published in THE NEWS; but there have been numerous charges of gross irregularities in the management of the election and the counting of the votes, and it is understood that Sheriff Mackey and his supporters have been industriously engaged, since the election, in securing sworn statements of such irragularities. which of canvassers, in the expectation of having the vote of those precincts at which the irregularities occurred thrown out of the count. A fortnight will probably determine what weight the State board of canvassers will attach to these charges. At all events, it is quite safe to say that nobody can tell who is elected until the result has been officially declared by that board.

While the prosperity and progress of Charleston, during the last year or two, have been so marked as to afford just cause for pride and rejoicing among her people, the fact that the burnt district still remains, in a great measure, a scene of ruin and desolation in the very heart of the city, is, to say the least, not creditable to the energy and business pluck of the community. That so large an area of the best building sites in Charleston should have been left vacant year after year, is mainly attributable to the short-sighted policy of the Legislature in refusing to give substantial encouragement to those among us who have the will and the means to rebuild. It was proposed to exempt from State and municipal taxation, for the term of live years, all improvements upon the lots which had been swept by the fire. The measure was so clearly an advantageous one for the interests of the city and State, as well as of our impoverished people, that it is hard to understand how it happened to encounter any opposition at all. But somehow-perhaps because it had not the magical greenback logic in its favor-it did fail to become a law; and, as a consequence, the contented cows are still quietly browsing in the pleasant pasturage of this dismal rus in urbe, which fire created and folly maintains for their exclusive benefit.

If the members of the new Legislature care to see the metropolis of South Carolina rise from the rains which for eleven vears have challenged the commiseration of every visitor; if they would see thousands of mechanics busy and earning good wages, where now there is but scant work for hundreds; if they would create millions of additional taxable resources, for which the city and State will otherwise have to wait until doomsday, they will hasten to repair the stupid error of their predecessors, and pass, among the earliest measures of the session, a law which will encourage capitalists from abroad to invest in Charleston, and allow our own unfortunate citizens a breathing spell in which to rebuild and beautify their desolated homes.

The State Press and the New Governor.

[From the Sumter Watchman.]

The incoming administration stands solemnly pledged, in their platform and its frequent reiteration throughout the canvass, to ignore the interest upon any and all portions of the public debt upon which the shadow of illegality rests. And however the reliability of these pledges may be regarded by some, by others and by many importance is thereto attached. But, be this as it may, the collection of tax by money, would put it out of the power of the incoming administration to redeem the pledges made, at least for a time. Should the exort be ing gold was almost as plenty as dirt; that the made, as indicated by Mr. Gary, we hope to climate is unequalled in the world; that the see some decided action on the part of those Pig Iron.

who are soon to assume the reins of the State Government. Any such action, we have no nesitation in saying, would meet ample sup port at the hands of the people of all classes. [From the Clerendon Press]

It rests with him (Moses) now to give the lie to these forebodings of his political enemies by entering, at the very threshold of his gubernatorial career, upon the work of needed reform. Such a course would vindicate hi character and assure the apprehensive citizen of South Carolina, who honestly feel dark des pair settling upon their hearts, that all will yet be well, and that there is a bright future for our unbappy State. He should remember that the very fact of his being a native citizen of South Carolina, (after our melancholy experience with the carpet bag gentry,) induces the support of a large part of even the white voters, and stayed the hands of others, who. ers of Mr. Tomlinson. The confidence of the masses in men to the manor born was exemplified in his election, notwithstanding his record did not compare favorably, if the charge of his competitor. Let him not disappoint the hopes of the people raised by such patriotic presumptions based upon citizenship. To this cause he is largely indebted for the apathy of the white people in the contest just closed, and their failure to deliver a solid vote, though in the minority, in favor of his opponent. Let us hope, then, that he will, as stated in a speech at Columbia, subsequent to his election, be careful to guard the best interests of all the inhabitants of South Carolina, irrespective of race and color. If it shall turn out, upon the experiment being tried, that the welfare of our State is safer in the hands of men who drew their first breath upon her soil, than in those of the adventurers who came among us with minds inimical to us, it will surely be such a result as might naturally be looked for.

The Multiplication of Hats. It is an old saying that enough is as good as feast. The axiom will apply to that inventve genius who has just evolved from the re esses of his brain a machine by which five thousand hats may be made ip one day. This is well enough in its way, but what is the good of making thirty thousand hats a week if the maker cannot find thirty thousand new heads a week to put into them? Heads without hats are certainly not desirable, but how much less desirable are hats without heads. Certainly a happy possessor of one of these machines is not obliged to make thirty thousand hats a week, if there be no demand for them; but if there be no demand, what is the ase of inventing a machine that will make so many? Here is a case of misplaced ingenuity, of genius thrown away; but it is not so bad a that machine that could turn out six thousand glass eyes in an hour, or one hundred and for ty-four thousand a day. Only think how nany people would have to get rid of one eye in order to properly reward the logenlous inventor of this valuable triumph of mind over matter. ...
